The art of Sybil Shane Studio was born out of a life-changing experience that Sybil had several years ago. She was able to be with her mother during her illness and death at home. Sybil realized after that intimate experience, that she needed to do what was most important to her at that point in her life. She sold her home, transferred her tax practice, and took some time off to be with her son. She took a year off, as well, for herself, and began to experiment with Japanese papers, collage, and origami. She visited Japan, and fell in love with Japanese design, calligraphy, flower arranging, origami, and silk painting. She began to take classes in art, silk painting, collage, and calligraphy, and out of that her studio was born. Sybil paints in her studio in a small town in the foothills of northern California.

Sybil is influenced by sparse, clean, Japanese design and is inspired by artists such as Hiroshige, Hokusai, David Lance Goines, and Mucha.
